Supporting Those with Dementia and Their Loved Ones

A day in the life of Day Program participant Octavio Barrera and his family

Octavio Barrera came from Mexico to the U.S. from the state of Chihuahua via the Bracero program. He moved from El Paso to Marysville, working at dairies, ranches and farms before arriving in Napa Valley. Here, he worked for Christian Brothers, first as a field worker, then foreman, then supervisor. He then worked at Silver Oak as a landscaper until retiring in 2000.

While working for Christian Brothers, he met his future wife, Stella, who was born and raised in St. Helena. They celebrated their 58th anniversary this year, and have three children, as well as grandchildren and great grandchildren, most of whom live in Napa Valley and Fairfield.

Octavio was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease in March 2019 and began attending the Day Program two and a half years ago. "My friend's father attended the Day Program and they really recommended it, as did Dad's doctor," explains his daughter Rita.

"Mom and I took classes that Collabria Care offered to better understand his condition and the responsibilities it entailed, and it really helped the whole family to be able to be there for Dad. Every employee here is so respectful and courteous. They will answer any questions at all and are so supportive of us, as well as Dad, reaching out weekly to see how we're all doing."

Octavio gets around with the help of a walker and a gait belt. On the days he attends the Day Program, the Collabria Care bus picks him up at home.

Octavio enjoys the opportunity to dance with Person-Centered-Care Specialist Bernie Morando during a music session.

Octavio often plays his guitar while Stella gardens, and he enjoys the company of his dog, Cheerio. Afternoons, he watches TV and exercises with Collabria via Zoom.

Octavio attends the Day Program two days a week. An avid guitar player and singer, he enjoys playing and singing along with visiting musician James Regan. Playing loteria, a Spanish-language game similar to bingo, is also a favorite activity and allows him to socialize with other participants.

“Growing up, Dad was very protective of all of us, and initially, it was hard for him to accept help,” says Rita. “But now it’s our turn to take care of him, and with Collabria Care’s help we are able to support him in a way that keeps him active and involved, enjoying his favorite activities and time with his family.”

He also takes part in activities such as riding an exercise bike (shown here with Physical Therapy Aide Dolores Ochoa) to maintain muscle strength and overall health.

On days he doesn’t attend the Day Program, Octavio enjoys spending time in the back yard.

Family gatherings happen regularly, with four generations in attendance. Octavio loves the energy of family get-togethers.

The Very Best Kind of Neighbor

Meet UpValley Village volunteer Meg Scrofani

When I was first introduced to the national concept of The Village, I was enamored with the idea. The mission of a Village is a neighbor-helping-neighbor approach for seniors who wish to continue aging in their own home and communities. The Village gives these seniors a vetted and trusted resource, their neighbors, to help with tasks and resources, while keeping seniors connected with their community. In the Napa Valley, the Village is referred to as UpValley Village (UVV) and includes the communities of Yountville, St. Helena, Calistoga, and Angwin. I have been personally delighted to be involved in bringing this neighbor-to-neighbor concept to Angwin where my husband Manny and I have lived for over 30 years.

Manny and I both spent our careers in education. We moved to Angwin after Manny accepted the position as superintendent in St. Helena and I as a school principal in Napa. We soon learned that although Yountville, St. Helena, Calistoga and Angwin are all part of Napa County, they are different from each other in resources, needs, services, organizations, priorities and accessibility.

What I love about being an UpValley Village volunteer is that I am a neighbor helping my neighbors, building connections that benefit not only individuals, but our community as a whole. I will always be grateful for my opportunity to be a volunteer for UpValley Village. If you are looking for a way to give back to your community, this is a great way to start.

I knew from my years in education, that to bring change, community members need to be involved at the grass roots level. The outreach began with a Task Force representing Pacific Union College, the Seventh Day Adventist Churches, and the Adventist Retired Teachers Association, among others. The Task Force, after a presentation on the Village concept, was asked to share ideas and thoughts on the Angwin community and the needs of its older members, and if the Village concept seemed to fit the needs of Angwin's seniors who want to remain in their homes but need support. Given an affirmative response, the Task Force began crafting a plan. The Angwin community embraced the idea: residents opened their homes to host events and connect us with those they thought would either need or support this program. Pacific Union College and the Seventh Day Adventist Church have been extremely supportive in helping bring the UpValley Village to Angwin.

I think part of the reason why UpValley Village has been successful in all four communities is that rather than providing a specific service—home visits, delivering supplies, or providing transportation—UVV works with each individual senior in the program to determine their specific needs to keep them safe and thriving in their own home and communities. The UVV truly is designed to provide person-centered care to meet the specific needs of each senior. An equally important Village concept is that community members have an opportunity to volunteer to support seniors in need in their own community. Even though the pandemic has greatly reduced many of the UVV outreach opportunities, UVV has remained flexible and responsive because we have the support of Collabria Care's entire system to offer guidance and knowledge of resources available for members if they need specialized services.

Stay independent.

Comfort and Support After the Loss of a Loved One

Bereavement care is available to all community members

Meet Grief Counselor Xavia Hendriksz.

A psychologist in South Africa for 15 years before moving to Napa, Xavia worked as a Project Coordinator/Manager, at Mentis for 7 years, overseeing the Healthy Minds, Healthy Aging program, where she worked closely with Collabria Care. She joined Collabria Care as its Grief Counselor in July 2021.

We live in a society that tends to be uncomfortable with grief and death. When we lose a loved one, there is usually an outpouring of support for the first week or two after their death, and then we're often expected to dry our tears and get on with life. But the reality is that there is a process to grief—it takes its own time and is different for each person, depending on our history and our personality. We all grieve in our own way—and we have a right to grieve on our own timeline.

Bereavement: noun.*

- 1. A period of mourning after a loss, especially after the death of a loved one.*
- 2. State of intense grief, as after the loss of a loved one.*

That's why Collabria Care's Bereavement Care is here. To offer practical and emotional support for those suffering from grief and loss, and to help them on their journey to healing.

Our grief support programs are open to any in our community who have suffered the loss of a loved one. There is a structured, eight-week "Learning to Live with Loss" program (see page 12). These programs bring together people in a safe and supportive environment so they can share and process what they're going through, and come to realize they are not alone. These programs are available at no charge.

Collabria Care also offers one-on-one bereavement support to the loved ones of our patients or our Day Program participants over the next year to offer support, and if they're feeling stuck or overwhelmed, connect them with any services available.

Not everyone may need bereavement counseling, but if you're feeling lost, unheard, or stuck after the passing—we're here for you.

Ensuring Quality of Life for Those with Chronic Heart Failure

Collabria Care's Cardiac Hospice Care addresses the unique challenges of those with heart failure and their loved ones

Neal and his sister Alveda

Neal Brown, 94, claims to be a dreamer, but in reality has been a doer all his life, active and involved in both his career and family. A civil engineer who graduated from Berkeley, Neal designed and built everything from major freeways to housing subdivisions. After retiring from his own business, he continued to work on homes for family members from California to Colorado to Idaho—even into his 80s.

“Dad suffered a heart attack and a stroke with paralysis in 2006,” says daughter Christina Canady, “but after eight weeks of rehabilitation, you wouldn’t know he had had a stroke. He had polio as a young adult, but didn’t share, until recently, that he has suffered from leg pain, every day since. He always just kept going, not wanting us to worry about him. But recently, he developed weakness and occasional chest pain, and I wasn’t sure he was managing his medications. I was worried.

“There’s a fine line when the child steps into the parent’s role—it’s hard for someone like my dad who’s very independent and used to caring for others to listen to his child advise him how to take care of himself.”

Neal, Alveda and Alveda's daughter Lenae reminisce over family photos.

Christina reached out to Neal's physician. He recommended Neal start on palliative care with Collabria Care. "Shortly after that, he was diagnosed with chronic heart failure," says Christina. Neal transferred from Collabria's palliative care to its cardiac hospice care.

"That diagnosis was three years ago, and thanks to the support we've received from Collabria Care, he still lives at home with my aunt and cousin, completes a few jigsaw puzzles each week to keep his mind sharp and enjoys visits and updates from his four children, four grandsons, six great-grandchildren and numerous nieces and nephews."

"Dad has a whole team caring for him. His nurses visit twice a week, checking and tracking his vitals, appetite and how he's feeling, reviewing his meds and ordering prescriptions for delivery. A home health aide comes twice a week to give him a massage to maintain his circulation and his social worker visits regularly. They're all kind and respectful, and like family to us. Times when we would have been reluctant to call the cardiologist with what seems like a small thing, we can call Collabria Care, any time of day or night. If there's an issue, they'll send a nurse right away.

"Just as importantly, it has brought peace to us as a family to have unbiased, medical professionals dedicated to his health and wellbeing. We can ask the nurses about anything, and if something needs to be addressed, they talk with him. He's more likely listen to them, and I don't have to get into an argument with him. Instead, we can just enjoy being father and daughter.

"Collabria Care cardiac hospice care has been a blessing to our entire family."

To learn more about Collabria Care's specialized cardiac hospice services visit collabriacare.org

Why does chronic heart failure require specialized hospice care?

Heart failure can be more challenging to navigate than other conditions: its progression and symptoms vary from patient to patient; the usual therapies often don't alleviate the chest pain, fatigue and shortness of breath; it can be difficult to differentiate between symptoms that are severe but benign, or symptoms that need immediate medical intervention. Without help, any of these can lead to unnecessary trips to the Emergency Department and increased stress for all concerned. Cardiac Hospice is a specialized level of hospice care, designed to carefully monitor the patient and communicate and support the caregivers, to improve comfort and quality of life, and to reduce emergency medical intervention.

Retail Therapy That Improves the Health of Our Community

Shopping at La Bohème makes Collabria Care's services available to all

Going on ten years, French-inspired re-sale boutique La Bohème has nurtured a continuing love affair with found treasures. An arm of Napa's Collabria Care-Collabria Hospice, the St. Helena-based store has become a must-stop destination for visitors and locals alike.

Through the generous donations of an eclectic and prosperous community, La Bohème offers a dynamically changing selection of wares that are often one-of-a-kind. Apart from fine china, silver, bespoke clothing, Jimmy Choo purses, and high-end linens, shoppers occasionally discover the exotic: hand-carved African chairs, Persian Tabriz rugs, Gabonese totems, porcelain elephants the size of a mini-fridge. The list goes on!

But La Bohème offers more than just the thrill of the hunt. Because each item came from someone's household in the community, there's often a story to be shared about its past. Shoppers are all ears. Many might leave without a purchase, but few leave without the cheerful neighborhood warmth the store imparts.

At the end of the day, La Bohème is even more. Many of the store's donors have been touched by Collabria Care's services—and they want to give back. In a way, every sale pays it forward to those experiencing the transitions of aging, serious illness, or end-of-life. The generosity of La Bohème's donors combines with the avid support of its shoppers. And this civic synergy funds programs crucial to the community, through Collabria Care's palliative and hospice services, and many other programs serving the whole county.

Which is the real magic that happens every day at La Bohème.

Meet Our New Shopkeeper/Treasure Finder

You could say that Dreanne Foust's career is all about going with the flow...including the cellar crew's open-hosed water fight at Stag's Leap Wine Cellars that spilled all over the tasting room she once supervised.

In addition to her stint in the wine business, Dreanne planned agricultural fairs, worked as an executive assistant, acted as a coordinator for volunteers and as event supervisor, and served as Philanthropy Officer at Providence Queen of the Valley Medical Center.

Why did Dreanne want to become La Bohème's shopkeeper? The short answer... she's loved thrifting for as long as she can remember. As a thirteen-year-old, she'd go on "treasure hunts" through the bins at Napa's Community Projects. By the time she was twenty, she became known to friends and family as the "thrift-store queen."

When the opportunity arose to run La Bohème, Dreanne leapt at the opportunity. In addition to finding treasure, Dreanne loves the eclectic mix of tourists, urbanites, and old-guard locals that wander in for new discoveries. Stationed on Main Street in the middle of a sense of shared community, Dreanne likens La Bohème to a genial, family-oriented pub without the alcohol.

What skill does she consider her best asset? Good taste! This roll-up-your-sleeves, no-nonsense shopkeeper somehow manages to be dynamic and humble at the same time. Direct and unassuming, Dreanne's refreshing ability to connect with people promises to keep long-time clients and donors happy, even as she charms new customers drawn to this thriving nonprofit resale boutique.
